Washington State Accredited Agency

Your Bellingham Police Department maintains a commitment to our community by respecting the people we serve, acting with integrity and demonstrating accountability to those that we serve.

As entrusted guardians of our community, our interactions in the performance of our official duties sometimes brings us into conflict with members of society that fail to heed our community's wishes for order and peace. It is the policy of your police department that your officers may only use that amount of force that is objectively reasonable and necessary in the performance of their legal duties. Your police department's use of force policies are consistent with the laws of the United States and the State of Washington. Your police department also strives to have policies that are consistent, with identified "best practices," and contemporary scientific discovery and application.

The components for constitutional policing are training, policy and supervision. Your police department maintains the highest standards and attention to all three areas and will continue to be an agency that serves its community with commitment, vision and values.

These calls for service also included officer-initiated activities where an officer contacted someone, performed a traffic stop or witnessed an incident and were investigating further.

In numbers: 0.02%, or approximately two one-hundredths of one percent.

Your police officers are allowed by law to use force in the discharge of their duties.

As the information above has already shown, your police officers very rarely have to use force to accomplish their lawful objectives. The reasons listed above show that some citizens do not wish to submit to officers' lawful authority. How the citizens resist lawful actions of your officers is detailed hereafter, along with officers' responses.

A citizens' resistance to lawful commands can take more than one form; sometimes your officers' response to these situations necessitates finding a solution that safely resolves the situation. For example, a citizen may refuse a lawful command, then flee on foot and ultimately resist physically when located. For that one incident, three specific items are documented. In the same manner, one of your officers may give a lawful verbal command. When that lawful command is disregarded the officer may need to employ a physical control technique such as tackling a fleeing citizen. Thus, two specific items are documented.

Of note, your officers noted that for this particular data set, citizens in 12 of the 13 incidents (92%) disregarded verbal commands wherein your officers used lawful force. Citizens were more likely to offer physical resistance to lawful commands after that. Your officers used authorized physical controls like grabbing arms for handcuffing or holding folks from fleeing far more than deploying other modalities of force like TASERs or physical strikes.

Your officers used lawful force against a citizen in August in 0.22%, or less than one-quarter of one percent of incidents. Your police department using force to accomplish lawful objectives is a rarity.

SECTION TWO: Involved Persons' Information

The data presented in this section will provide information on the citizens involved in your police department's use of force incidents, along with information on your police officers involved in those incidents.

Injuries to Citizens due to Officers' force: 7 / 54% YTD 53 / 32%

- Abrasions, K9 injuries and TASER puncture

For the month of August, your officers used lawful force 0.22%, or less than one-quarter of one percent in the incidents they responded to. Of the 5953 incidents your officers responded to, only seven of those contacts resulted in any kind of notable injury to a citizen.

In numbers: 0.12%, or around one-tenth of one percent of incidents responded to by your officers resulted in an injury from your officers using lawful force against a citizen.

Citizens Transported to Hospital: 6 / 46% YTD 53 / 32%

- Two emergent detentions, two jail requirements

Your officers noted that in instances where they applied lawful force, two citizens appeared to be having a mental health issue that posed a danger to themselves or others. Your police department strives to have mental health issues handled by the hospital, not the jail, and thus your officers took the citizen to the hospital for the appropriate care.

Injuries to Officers:	1 / 8%	YTD 24 / 15%
Officers Transported to Hospital:	0	YTD 0
Median Age of Citizen:	26 years	32 years
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Youngest 15, Oldest 58
Median Age of Officer:	38 years	36 years
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Youngest 23, Oldest 57

Median ages were determined to be the best descriptor in these two categories, as the reader can gain a better appreciation for the more-likely ages rather than having an average age be skewed by outliers.

In addition, this information serves as a good reminder to the fact that your officers encounter folks from all age ranges in the performance of their official duties and sometimes encounter unlawful resistance from citizens, both younger and older.

Statistical analysis of police use of force often has a discussion component concerning the population demographics of the involved citizens. The reader is cautioned to remember that from a statistical basis, comparing outlying events to population demographics often will not give the reader an accurate assessment of the situation.

For example, in the month of August 69% of citizens that your officers used lawful force on were residents of either Whatcom County or the City of Bellingham.

However, do not forget that in the month of August your officers used lawful force in only 0.22%, or less than one-quarter of one percent of incidents. So these incidents are truly outliers and thus may not adhere to population demographics. For example in August, in order to achieve lawful objectives lawful force was used by your police department three times against persons of Asian ancestry, or 0.05%, or around five one-hundredths of one percent in the incidents for the month. This is nowhere near the city demographic.
